Unveiling the myths: Towards a people-owned strategy for ending HIV and AIDS in Africa

Over twenty years since the first HIV infections were reported, the world is yet to find the cure for the disease. This has severely undermined the rights and dignity of people living with HIV. With more than 70% of all people living with HIV/AIDS in the world, the prevalence of HIV and AIDS in Africa and its direct consequences is something that should stir all of us to action.

What is it that we are not doing right?

Is there genuine commitment to stop the spread of HIV/AIDS or is the fight against AIDS profits-driven agenda?

Is global funding really facilitating the fight against HIV and AIDS?

Is anyone paying attention to the people directly affected by HIV & AIDS? Do we even realize that they have alternative strategies that are bearing fruits against AIDS?
